

10th March 2005 - Black Rock Oil and Gas appoints new exploration manager

Black Rock Oil and Gas (BROG) – the UK-based oil exploration minnow – has appointed Graham Rollinson to the position of Consultant Exploration Manager.

Rollinson is a geologist with more than 30 years of experience in the oil and gas sector, the majority of which has been spent involved in operations in the North Sea – an area that Black Rock are keen to exploit.

Speaking about his appointment, Rollinson told IJ News: ‘I was attracted to Black Rock Oil and Gas because it is a new entry into the UK and is very active – with both onshore and offshore activities – and keen to grow.’

For fourteen years Rollinson was exploration director of Santa Fe and more recently he has worked for Saga Petroleum and latterly ONV UK.

Max Thompson

Max Thompson - Energy editor
Infrastructure Journal
26a Adam and Eve Mews
London, W8 6UJ
+44 (0) 20 7938 3660
www.ijonline.com